

Puita (southwest Africa)

It's unique in that the sound is not produced by the drum's head being beaten with a stick or hand but by friction.

The puita is directly linked to the Brazilian cuica which creates one of the sounds central to Latin dance music. It may have been introduced to Brazil by Bantu slaves from Africa.